

Hello, my name is Grace. I'm from South Africa, and what _____ (person / personal) info do I think is no one else's _____ (business / businesses)?

I would say having children. I love _____ (kidding / kids), and it doesn't mean that everyone's going to _____ (had / have) kids, and some people don't like kids, and they will have _____ (children / child), but I think putting the pressure on people, especially if you _____ (see / see) a couple together and you go, right, _____ (why / when) are you having children? Or just asking someone because of _____ (they're / their) age if they're going to have children. I'm _____ (fortunate / fortunately) in that I don't really get that question a lot, but I do think it's something _____ (personally / personal), that it's not just _____ (somewhere / something) you do. It's not like going to the shop to buy some milk. It's not like _____ (justify / just) getting a pet. That's a big _____ (responsibility / responsible), but you know you're going to _____ (outlive / outdoor) your pet, your child will be your responsibility, your _____ (connection / connectivity), someone that you're connected to for the rest of your _____ (live / life). It's not something that's _____ (mention / mentioned) or should be mentioned in just really _____ (casually / casual) conversation with _____ (acquaintances / acquaintance).

So, yeah, I would _____ (say / said) that's something that's _____ (not / none) of people's business.
